The train arrived to the theaters in any great numbers, at 1 o'clock. but in the hands of Mr. Miller, Miss Anglin furnish a pleasant evening's entertainwith a Revolutionary background, and with British red coats and Continentals as leading figures-one of the kind not unfamiliar to the regular play house attendant. There are no especially strong dramatic situations in it, neither is the owned by the roads named have been discomedy broad enough to convulse one with criminated against to at least 5 per cent of laughter, but there are enough pretty pictures sufficiently diversified to interest and amuse the auditor. It might properly be called a play of scenes, for while there is a story told, it is not so well connected but what one finds plenty of time to forget it in their admiration of some pretty picture such as for instance the roystering scene of the British officers in act it., where a dozen of them, dressed in their bright red uniforms, surround a table drinking, smoking and singing popular songs of the time, principal of which was one by no means forgotten by the present generation, "Sally urer. Summed up as a whole the play is really beneath players of Mr. Milles and Miss to the Pacific coast will begin within two Anglin's caliber attention. Mr. Miller is a years. An increase of a little over $25,000,romantic actor and one of recognized merit, for his portrayal of the part of the elder Brabazon in "Sowing of the Wind" made an impression that will take many years to efface, but there is little opportunity in "D'Arry of the Guards" for a display of ability along this line. What the character of Jack D'Arcy is given to do. by the author of the piece is of course exceptionally well handled by Mr. Miller, but it is really so trivial that the names ofa half dozen actors of much lesser importance or ability than Mr. Miller might be mentioned who could do the part quite as

"Mr. Perkins owns a large farm in ment. It is one of those military plays Kansas, which he has stocked with quall, and he makes a visit to it once every year. The directors usually try to arrange to make their trip about the same time, and we spend from ten days to two weeks indulging in this sport.

"We left Chicago last Monday and the following day was spent at Burlington, where we met Mr. Perkins. The entire trip will consume almost two weeks, and there is nothing but pleasure connected with it. The board of directors has not taken any action yet in regard to a successor to Second Vice President Howard Elliott, who recently became president of the Northern Pacific, and I do not think it will make any change for some time to Milwaukee to the Coast.

Roswell Miller, chairman of the board of directors of the Milwaukee, is credited with the assertion that construction work on the proposed extension of the Milwaukee 000 in the capital stock of the company was made about one year ago, and it is thought that it is for this purpose. The issue of this additional stock has not yet taken place, and this is caused by the traffic agreement the road was able to make with the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, which placed it upon an equality with the Northwestern from Chicago west. That arrangement gave it through service, both passenger and freight, to California and Northern Pacific points, but it has not come up to the full expectations of the Milwaukee.
